FemmeHacks

How to stay involved post-FemmeHacks:

- At your school: If you're at Penn, join WiCS. If you're not at Penn, find your school's women in tech chapter. If there is none, start your own! Penn WiCS can help you get started.

- Lean In: Start a Lean In circle, or better yet, a Lean In chapter at your school.

- Volunteer: There are so many Philly organizations that are the coolest. Some particular orgs we luv include TechGirlz, Girl Develop It, and HopeWorks 'n Camden.

- Apply to NCWIT: NCWIT connects badass women hackers like you with great opportunities and an awesome, super supportive community. Apply here.

- Continue your project: Just because FemmeHacks is over :(doesn't mean you should stop working on your hack! Work with your team to develop a longer timeline with specific deliverables, and meet regularly go work and ~bond~.

- Stay Connected: Join some Facebook groups, like this (and our FemmeHacks hacker group).

- Attend Conferences: Attend women in tech conferences. Many companies and schools provide scholarships for you to attend. They're super inspiring and you meet lots of great women. The biggest conference is Grace Hopper, but there are plenty more (like this one).
